

When he came to himself, he knew he had been miraculously delivered from prison by God's hand. He made his way to the home of Mary where many believers were praying. When they finally let him in (because they couldn't believe it was really Peter), he told them how he had been delivered and to tell other believers his story before he left for another place. (Acts 12:11-17)